News Briefs

Susceptibility to breast cancer is determined by the same genetic factors that influence the rate of breast secretion, Nicholas L. Petrakis, Professor of Preventive Medicine, recently told the National Breast Cancer Task Force.

Dr. Petrakis and colleagues have found a high concentration of environmental products in the breast tissue of non-milk producing women whose rate of breast fluid secretion is high. This absorption of environmental products may contribute to local cell damage and eventual tissue cell change and malignancy in some women, while low or absent secretory activity may minimize contact of the breast with environmental carcinogens.

Jeanette Yeazell, who retired as University Librarian effective December 31, expressed the wish that in place of a retirement party the campus create a fund to purchase books for the Library. Vice Chancellor Leslie L. Bennett has invited all members of the campus family who are interested to become a "Friend of the UCSF Library" by making a donation to a special fund. Books purchased with these funds will have a bookplate which reads: Donated by Friends of the UCSF Library to honor the retirement of Mrs. Jeanette Yeazell, University Librarian, 1953-1976.

Checks should be made payable to the Regents of the University of California, and sent to the Academic Affairs Office, 115 S, Attn: Toni Nagle, with a notation that it is for "The Friends of the Library Fund." All contributions are tax deductible.

All University employees who are members of the University Retirement Plan without Social Security will be given a second opportunity to coordinate with Social Security in April, 1977. Full details are contained in an Official Notice with each eligible UCRS (UC Retirement System) member will receive this month. A Social Security Request Card for a statement of Social Security covered earnings and quarters of coverage will be enclosed with the Official Notice. The Request Cards must be mailed before the end of this month.

A limited supply of Social Security Request Cards are available in room 64 U for eligible UCRS members who wish to request Social Security statements before receiving cards with the Official Notice.

A method using electrical current to stimulate healing of fractures that fail to mend following conventional treatment is being introduced for the first time in Northern California by the Department of Orthopedic Surgery. It is hoped that this technique will prove an alternative to bone grafts, which often must be performed when fractures do not repair themselves.

The study is directed at SFGH by Lorraine Day, Assistant Professor of Orthopedic Surgery, and on the UCSF campus by Don Jewett, Associate Professor of Orthopedic Surgery. Eligible for the program are patients referred by their physicians for treatment of a non-infected fracture in which the healing process has stopped. Fractures of the spine, pelvis, ribs, skull and femoral neck are not included in the study.

A grant of $197,448 for research in immunology has been received by UCSF from the John A. Hartford Foundation of New York. This grant will support research by Arthur J. Ammann, Associate Professor of Pediatrics and Director of both the Pediatric Immunology Section and the Pediatric Clinical Research Center.

Dr. Ammann will be investigating the white blood cells to determine whether they normally help prevent autoimmune diseases, such as rheumatoid arthritis and systemic lupus erythematosus. In these diseases, the body becomes in effect immune to itself, attacking some of its own tissues as if they were foreign grafts or an infectious agent. Defects in the body's production of white blood cells, or of particular types of white blood cells, may be involved in the development of autoimmune diseases. Dr. Ammann will also investigate whether such white blood cell deficiencies can be treated by extracts from the thymus gland or transplantation of thymus glands into affected patients. Most of the body's white blood cells are normally produced in the thymus gland.

An advanced echocardiographic device that provides a noninvasive way to look directly through the chest wall at the living heart is being used by UCSF.

The instrument represents an advanced form of echocardiography that for the first time produces a two-dimensional picture of the entire heart, said Nelson B. Schiller, Assistant Professor of Medicine. This motion picture is used in diagnosing patients with heart problems.

UCSF's echocardiographic device is considerably more accurate than conventional echocardiography, and may be as accurate as cineangiography, which is now the traditional method of diagnosing heart disease, Dr. Schiller reported at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association, November 18. Dr. Schiller said that echocardiography could replace or supplement cineangiography in diagnosing many patients with heart problems. This would eliminate the need for many patients to endure an uncomfortable procedure that requires an incision or needle puncture into an artery in the arm or leg so that tubes can be pushed into the chambers of the heart. Cineangiography also requires that the patient be exposed to radiation.

Co-authors of the paper were Harry Acquatella, Dennis Drew, Robert Boswell, Elias Botvinick, Barry Greenberg, and Eric Carlsson.
